

RESEARCH ARTICLE

OPEN ACCESS

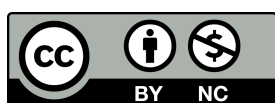

Editorial note

Prof. Dr. Chakrapani Luitel¹

¹Professor, Ratna Rajya Laxmi
Campus
Tribhuvan University, Nepal
Email: luitelcp@yahoo.com

To cite this paper

Luitel, C. (2026). Editorial note.
Economic Review of Nepal, 9(1).
<https://doi.org/10.3126/ern.v9i1.96130>

© 2026.

Published in Economic Review of Nepal, Department of Economics,
Ratna Rajyalaxmi Campus,
Tribhuvan University. This paper is distributed under the terms of the
Creative Commons CC BY-NC
4.0 DEED
(<https://creativecommons.org/licenses/by-nc/4.0/>).

It is a matter of enormous pleasure to publish the Economic Review of Nepal (ERN), 9(1) by the Department of Economics, Ratna Rajyalaxmi Campus. The department is striving for the publication of scholarly articles on various areas of economics in the English medium. This journal, containing 8 articles, has a variety of writings in the domain of economics from national and international scholars. The journal offers ample evidence of how current economic, financial, governance, and social issues in developing countries can be tackled through empirical study and policy analysis. This journal enhances knowledge on the process of digital revolution, dynamics of money and banking sectors, local governance effectiveness, women's inclusion, and socio-economic wellbeing, focusing particularly on Nepal and other emerging nations. Through such context-based analysis and policy options, these studies greatly help in making evidence-based decisions and sustainable development. Moreover, economic issues seem to play a paramount role in the twenty-first century. Therefore, it is hoped that this academic work could quench readers' appetites to some extent.

Finally, it is claimed that the strength of this journal is contingent on the inclusion of diverse current issues of economic literature. The articles of ERN are highly fruitful to those interested in economics literature, such as scholars, policymakers, researchers, students of economics, and other scientific communities. Any constructive comments and suggestions are welcome and will be appreciated for future issues.